James and Mary were the parents of eight children. They were Janet, Mary who died in childhood, James, Veronica, Mary, John Murray, Margaret who died in childhood, and William. Father James' life was taken while the children were still young and this left Mary, or Wee Granny, as she was so affectionately called, to rear her six living children and an orphaned neice. Wee Granny and all of the children joined the church, with the exception of the two oldest, Janet and James. They eventually left their Scotland home and migrated to America and to Utah. Wee Granny never reached Utah, dying enroute while part of the ill fated Martin Handcart company. The four children, however, made their homes in Zion and reared their families. Those of us who are numbered among their decendents pay tribute to them, and for this reason we are recording their histories that we might treasure them always.
